

ABOUT KYEI AMOAKO

Kyei Amoako is a strategist, author and certified coach who helps leaders and teams think clearly, communicate effectively and take action on what matters most to them. Through his work in strategic communications, growth strategy and people development, he helps individuals and teams identify clear paths toward their goals while uncovering the stories and insights that shape their values, vision and decisions.

Born in Accra, Ghana, Kyei studied at West Africa Secondary School and Presbyterian Boys' Secondary School before continuing his education at Kean University and Franklin University in the United States. His professional journey has included roles with global organizations such as Huntington National Bank, Nationwide Insurance and PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC), with his most recent role being a Vice President of Communications at JPMorgan Chase. For more than 20 years, Kyei has helped leaders across various industries solve problems, execute with discipline and create meaningful impact.

He is the author of several books, including Life in Progress, a reflective memoir about how our decisions ultimately shape the outcomes we experience in life. He shares lessons from his personal and professional journey to encourage others to embrace their potential, think critically and approach life with purpose, personal responsibility and greater confidence.

Kyei enjoys exploring new ideas and helping others turn potential into results. He lives by the mantra: win where it matters, look for the best in people and make room for serendipity.
